"There's no better instrument for coordinating appointments."

Doodle is distinguished in the NZZ Folio 06/08 "Internet gems" as one of those Web sites "certainly worth visiting". Doodle is the only entry in the category Appointment coordination.

"Actually, the Swiss informatics graduate Michael Näf only developed the first version of this site because he wanted to meet up with a few friends and was unable to find a date. Today, many thousands of people use Doodle: students and managers, game friends and gymnastics clubs. There's no better instrument for coordinating appointments. Registration is not required, and anybody can open an online poll on the Doodle Web site with just a few mouse clicks and send the corresponding link to the participants, who can then enter their appointment preferences."

"It's far easier with Doodle.""

"If you have ever tried to commit more than five people to a meeting, you know how tricky this can be.

You request an appointment and propose two dates by E-mail. A short time later, verbose negative replies arrive in dribs and drabs with alternative proposals. If you send these out to the group, chaos supreme reigns. It's far easier with Doodle. Organizing meetings becomes almost as easy as pie with an online appointment planner."

Spiegel online, 07/29/2008

"Doodle's group polling app saved the day"

"Group polling for scheduling large events

During the organization of a recent reunion event that involved upwards of 80 people, trying to figure out what the best date was for everyone, Doodle's group polling app saved the day. Set up a Doodle poll with possible dates and times for any kind of gathering with lots of attendees, and E-mail out the Doodle URL, where each person can enter what times they can make it, and see who else is available when."

"Doodle updraft"

"More and more people use the Internet service Doodle. However, only a few insiders know that ETH graduates are behind it. (...)"

Neue Zürcher Zeitung, 04/28/2008

"All first-time doodlers are knocked off their feet: there are virtually no obstacles. No registration, no profile, no further ado."

"Help is here, equally unspectacular and efficient. The "Doodle.de" site, like a misspelt Google, provides an astonishingly simple service. If you have questions you wish to pose to your circle of acquaintances, simply write them down. Add the reply options, your E-mail address and get cracking."
